

ELI YAMIN

Workshops

Eli Yamin is a dynamic and engaging workshop leader who has designed and facilitated workshops for Lincoln Center Institute for the Arts in Education at Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts, New York University, LaGuardia High School for the Performing Arts, The Berkeley Carroll School, Adventures in Teaching and Counseling and Young Audiences New York. As an active performer and composer with a Master's degree in Music Education and a philosophy deeply rooted in the hands-on, experiential and wildly inventive approach of Aesthetic Education developed at Lincoln Center Institute, Eli brings a unique set of skills to the workshop environment. Whether it is a big band master class on performing Duke Ellington or a workshop on Francis Poulenc for Social Studies and Math teachers, Eli's enthusiasm and organization allow workshop participants to reinvigorate their imagination and access more fulfilling levels of performance.

Here are some responses to Eli's workshops:

"Eli Yamin was a wonderful teacher/artist. His enthusiasm was contagious – He kept us focused and we learned a lot."

-Participant in Summer Session for Teachers, Lincoln Center Institute

"You energized the group and helped them discover unique ways of accessing feelings that desperately need expressing. You modeled skills and activities that they can use in working with their own students...and most importantly, you demonstrated how emotional work, laughter and play are conjoint."

-Dr. Toby Feinson, director Adventures in Teaching and Counseling

"He skillfully involved students in every step in the process of music composition. The clearest testament to his work that day, however, was the fact that the students had obviously fallen in love with the music they were making with Eli. By introducing children to age-appropriate skills in an exciting way, Eli engages students in the process of creating music without sacrificing the integrity of the discipline."

-Mary Esther Malloy, Associate Director of Programs and Artist Development, Young Audiences New York

"We continue to learn from you invaluable lessons about creative composition, dedication and teamwork."

-Elizabeth Ophals, Principal of The Louis Armstrong Middle School
